

Privacy Statement

Effective: April 2026

We built EVO around one principle: your data is yours.

EVO finds the money your contracts are owed. To do that, we need to process your financial data. Here is exactly what we do with it — and what we don't.

What you upload

To run EVO, you provide five CSV files:

- Vendors — your supplier list
- Contracts — your agreed contract terms
- Invoices — invoices you have received
- Payments — payments you have made
- Credits — credit memos issued to you

These files contain your company's financial records. We treat them accordingly.

Vendor anonymization — automatic and immediate

The moment your files arrive, EVO automatically replaces all vendor names with anonymous codes — Vendor-001, Vendor-002, and so on. This happens before the engine ever runs. Real vendor names never enter our detection engine, never appear in logs, and are never stored.

If you prefer to anonymize your vendor names yourself before uploading, EVO will detect this and preserve your own codes. Either way, real vendor identities never touch our system.

A temporary mapping between your vendor names and their anonymous codes is created during your session solely to generate your findings report. This mapping is deleted along with all other session data within one hour of your session completing.

What happens to your data

During your session: Your files are uploaded to a secure, isolated session on our servers. Each session is completely isolated. No other client can access your data, and you cannot access theirs.

After your session: Your uploaded files, the anonymization mapping, and the working database created during processing are automatically deleted within one hour of your session completing. We do not archive, back up, or retain your raw financial data.

What we keep: We retain only anonymized aggregate statistics — total variance identified, number of findings by type, total spend analyzed. These numbers contain no vendor names, no invoice numbers, no payment records, and no information that could identify your company or your suppliers. They contribute to the aggregate figures displayed on our website.

Your findings report: The PDF report generated during your session is created in your browser and downloaded directly to your device. We do not store copies of your report.

What we never do

- We never sell your data to third parties
- We never share your data with other clients
- We never use your data to train AI models
- We never store your vendor names, invoice records, or payment history beyond your session
- We never contact your vendors
- We never disclose your findings to anyone outside your organization
- We never see your real vendor names — anonymization happens automatically on receipt

We use Plausible Analytics — a privacy-respecting, cookie-free tool that collects no personal data and sets no cookies. No other tracking software is used.

Who processes your data

Your data is processed on servers hosted by Railway (railway.app), a US-based infrastructure provider. Data is transmitted over encrypted HTTPS connections. Session directories are stored in temporary storage and deleted automatically.

Your vendor identities

EVO is designed so that your vendor relationships remain completely private. Anonymization is built into the upload process — real vendor names are replaced with codes the moment your files arrive, before any processing begins. Your findings report uses only these anonymous codes.

Trial sessions

During the trial period, each approved client receives up to 30 sessions over 90 days. Each session is independent. Data from one session is not carried over to the next.
